Dear Jugy and -

True, I've never had a letter on Sesame Street stationery before. Or clippings cut out with pinking shears, merely makes them more valuable.

But I wish my handwriting were as legible as yours!

I've not yet read all the clippings but they are valuable. I've read those not relating to the FBI's releases and have begun those on the releases. With the latter I decided that I'd have to have a better file so I'm mounting them on paper, which takes time. So I let that wait for the TV news, there being plenty to do anyway. Now they are mounted and I'm reading them during commercials and to items that do not interest me.

Marking up what is of future interest as I read. These stories do have what is not in the Washington stories.

I'm sorry we could not get down there on the Enquirer project. The extra work has been even more time consuming than I'd feared. I've far from through with it.

Sounds like you and Jim have been making beautiful improvements. I'll see them sometime, maybe not in the distant future.

There is a new TV project to which we were intoruduced last night. The people seem to be okay and they seem to want to be responsible. If with the passing of time this turns out to be the way they are for real, maybe they'll want to shoot an interview with Jim. I've told them what I believe to be the importance of what they can expect from Jim.

I think also that I've turned them from the normal and supersensational approach to the subject. I'll know more in a couple of days when they will be returning.

What is most encouraging about this is that Lil liked these people, all strangers to her. Our experiences have made her suspicious of just about all. After about six hours, including liquid lubrication, which put her in a better position to evaluate, her impression was favorable. As she says, I trust everyone. She doesn't.

If it continues to look responsible you'll know. Have to be more careful with TV. They can select and edit, which means you can be at the mercy of those who are without decent principle.

Hope you all have a nice holiday and a good year ahead.

Thanks again for the valuable clips. When I get them is not as important as that I get them.

Sincerely,
